"Of all the tools the Navy will employ to control the seas in any future war, the most useful of the combatant ships, the destroyer, will be sure to be there. Its appearance may be altered and it may even be called by another name, but no type — not even the carrier or the submarine — has such an assured place in the future navies."

U.S.S. CUSHING

Commander William B. Cushing

USS CUSHING is named after Commander William Barker Cushing, a Naval hero of the Civil War. Born in Delafield, Wis., Nov. 4, 1842, he entered the Naval Academy in 1857. He became lieutenant on July 16, 1862, and subsequently attained the rank of commander on Jan. 31, 1872.

After brilliant service in the blockading fleet off the North Carolina coast, his plans to outfit torpedo boats to destroy the formidable and dangerous Confederate ram, Albemarle were approved. On Oct. 27, 1864, Cushing in a torpedo boat manned by 15 volunteers, eluded the enemy lookouts and crept up the Roanoke River under defense fire from small arms and succeeded in disabling the Confederate ram Albemarle. For this action, Cushing was promoted and officially thanked by Congress, the only non-flag officer of the war to be so honored.

In the four years he had risen from midshipman to lieutenant commander he was under fire perhaps more than any other officer in the Navy and seemed to have escaped without a scratch.

After the Civil War he served in both Pacific and Asiatic squadrons; commanded the Lancaster and Maumee; served as ordnance officer, Boston Navy Yard; and from July 11, 1873 commanded the USS WYOMING until relieved of active duty because of illness.

While commanding USS WYOMING in the Caribbean, he helped to free the passengers of a ship detained by the Spanish government in Cuba. Commander Cushing died on December 17, 1874 at the age of thirty two.

The talent show was a welcomed break from the day to day grind of life in the Indian Ocean. It gave some of the crewmembers a chance to ham it up. There was music, singing, comedy, and a demonstration of the Martial Arts.

PROJECT HANDCLASP

TRINCOMALEE SRI LANKA

17 September was a significant day for CUSHING and for United States diplomacy. On that date the Golden Lion steamed into Trincomalee, Sri Lanka, the first U.S. Naval vessel to do so in sixteen years.

During the three day stop, crewmembers enjoyed the local hospitality and sites, participating in social functions, athletic competitions, and community action projects.

Several tons of clothing, medical supplies, toys, and food were distributed. Also CUSHING sailors joined with their Sri Lankan counterparts to renovate a dormitory room at St. Mary's Orphanage.
